AIRSHIP DEAL STILL PENDING

Merchants Consider Proposed Appearance Here of Paul Peck in His Columbia Biplane.

WORK ON GUARANTEE FUND

Plans to Fly From Connersville to Ball Park Here Where Exhibition Will be Given.

Negotiations for the appearance here next Wednesday of Paul Peck in his Columbia biplane are still under way. In order to secure the attraction it is necessary to raise a guarantee fund and the amusement committee of the Merchants Association met with considerable success in the short time they worked last evening.

Henry B. Marks, manager for the Peck Aviator company, was in the city again this afternoon and it is more than likely that the deal will be closed. Peck will give an exhibition in Connersville next Wednesday afternoon and the plans are for him to fly to this city from there. If the present arrangements carry out Peck will land at the ball park just at the close of the game. Manager Maibaugh will make an effort to secure the Maxwell-Briscoe team of Newcastle for the game here Wednesday.

In this manner the crowd that is expected to attend will witness a good ball game while awaiting the arrival of the famous birdman. After arriving here from Connersville, Peck will give a series of flights from the ball grounds. The admission to the grounds would include the ball game and the aviation stunts. It is estimated that about one in every fifty people in Rush county has ever witnessed an airship flight and that this special attraction would draw an enormous crowd.

The aviator makes it a rule either to fly or take no money. With a crowd, which he is expected to draw, the backers of the flight should not lose any money. The first idea—that of holding a "Big Wednesday" has been abandoned. The association did not feel like being responsible and as Peck would draw the people here, no other inducement needs be offered. An attraction of this kind can not be booked every day as cheap as this one and a majority of the merchants favor the plan of giving so much towards the guarantee fund.

Paul Peck is one of the best known and most daring of aviators. This week he is giving flights at Middletown Ohio fair. One of his stunts is to carry mail in his airship. Last week at Cincinnati Peck carried mail by airship route. Concerning his feat the Enquirer says:

There was a rush of more than 1000 people to mail a souvenir postal card via the airship route at Coney Island recently. The news that Paul Peck, aviator, had carried mail from Coney to California Friday spread rapidly, and the mail bag that Peck dropped from his bi-plane 4000 feet above California Saturday was a fat one indeed.

The mail-carrying flight was started at 6 o'clock, but before this journey Peck evolved in the air in spirals, voloplanes, dip-the-dips and glides in a fifteen-minute flight that set the vast throng surrounding the hanger into repeated cheers.

G. P. Mauzy Takes Command But Automobile Refuses to Stay in Middle of Road.

GOES RIGHT THROUGH FENCE

G. P. Mauzy, while driving his new automobile for the first time, lost control of the machine and it dashed through a fence into a corn field on the John Powers farm north of the city. The fact that no one of the people in the machine was hurt was considered rather miraculous as it was traveling at such a rate of speed that it would have been very easy to upset the car.

Although Mr. Mauzy had owned the auto a month he had never ventured to assume control of the wheel. He finally worked up his courage and took command. It was only shortly after he had taken a seat in front of the wheel that by a "strange fancy all its own, it left the road, tore down a fence as if it were one of straw and cut a swath in John Powers' corn. When one of Mr. Mauzy's friends asked him when he intends to go hunting for roasting ears, he always answers with a smile.

CARNIVAL STARTS OFF WITH A WHOOP

Four Nights of Amusement, Under Auspices of Catholic Young Men, Promises Much.

LARGE CROWD AT OPENING

With all the splendor and hip hoorah of former years, the annual Catholic young men's carnival opened last night in the park back of the church for a four night's stand. The crowd on the opening night was a revelation to the managers of the carnival. People swarmed all over the grounds and patronized the various booths liberally.

The chief attraction this year is the Edmunds and Leville Comedy company of eight people. It played before packed houses last night and proved to be an entertaining show. The Rushville concert band gave a concert last night and will furnish a part of the entertainment every night during the carnival. Many people in automobiles and other vehicles enjoyed the band concert from the streets nearby. Swartz's merry-go-round is one of the attractions this year.

J.E. WATSON WILL SOUND KEYNOTE

Former Congressman Will Preside as Temporary Chairman of State Convention in Indianapolis.

INVITED BY THE COMMITTEE

Spends Today Writing His Speech—to Speak at Nashville Rally Saturday.

James E. Watson spent today at his home here busily engaged in writing the keynote speech for the Republican State convention which will be held in Indianapolis Tuesday, August sixth. He only recently decided to act in this capacity at the meeting of the Indiana Republicans.

Mr. Watson attended the meeting of the Republican State central committee a few weeks ago when the date for the State convention was set and the official call for the election of delegates to the convention was made. At that time he was tendered the position as temporary chairman.

At that time Mr. Watson did not promise to accept the place, but promised to formulate an answer in a few days. Since he has found that it will be convenient to attend the State convention, the former congressman has prepared to sound the keynote of the Republican campaign in Indiana. It falls to the lot of the temporary chairman to make the chief speech of the convention.

Mr. Watson will act only in the capacity of temporary chairman. It is said that a prominent Republican will be selected by the State committee to preside during the convention when Mr. Watson retires as temporary chairman.

Mr. Watson will go to Brown county Saturday to open the Republican campaign there. He will make a speech at Nashville, the county seat, and the day will be turned into a Republican rally. The Brown county chairman has widely advertised the day and has been attempting to attract a crowd from outside the county.

Mr. Watson will make the trip to Nashville with John C. Blackledge in his automobile. A number of Republicans from this city and county are planning to attend the rally.

IMPRESSION IS THAT IT WAS HOT

Many Profess to Believe Today Was the Hottest Day of the Summer.

TEMPERATURE SOARS TO 95

There was a general impression abroad today that it was hot. It was not the kind of heat that has prevailed this month, when the air was so humid. Many people expressed the opinion that it was the hottest day of the summer in Rushville. The temperature arose to ninety-five degrees by several thermometers, and remained stationary for several hours during the middle of the day.

Relief from the intense hot wave was promised by the weather bureau. The prediction of "fair and cooler tonight and Thursday" brought a smile to the face of many a man down on the street this afternoon.

C.W. STIVERS IS BACK IN HARNESS

To Prove His Sincerity, Editor of the Liberty Herald Comes Back With Aggressive Statement.

SAYS THE PARTY STILL LIVES

Will Survive Hysteria of Agitators and Revolutionary False Pretenders Assailing It.

C. W. Stivers, the editor of the Liberty Herald, who, a few weeks ago, had some misunderstanding with his son concerning the newspaper, is back in the harness, and he has lost none of his aggressive vigor and power which has always characterized his editorial utterances. The Liberty Herald will say in part Friday:

The Republican party still lives and will survive the hysteria of the agitators and revolutionary false pretenders who, in their frenzy, now seek to wreck the organization that has done more for humanity than any political party in existence.

The principles and cardinal policies of the Republican party are as essential for the welfare of the American people now as at any time since 1856 when the party was organized.

Under President Taft and a Republican protective tariff this country was never more prosperous than today. American farmers were never receiving better prices for all products of the farm. Labor, skilled and unskilled, was never more generally employed, nor was the average wage scale higher than today in America.

The hullabaloo about the down-trodden masses and the so-called commonality, about whom Bryan, Roosevelt, Debbs and other agitators are howling is a grotesque farce, a chimera, a juggler and faker's trick to catch the unthinking and work out their selfish schemes and personal aggrandisement.

The truth is there are no down-trodden masses in America at the mercy of "predatory wealth" or "corrupt bosses" under whose heels all free people must remain in servility. No, indeed! This is a nation of free people, living, moving and having a part in a government founded by the wisest and most enlightened statesmen that ever lived.

Under the provisions of our government there is a protection for all American citizens; there is justice for all, rich or poor, as well as opportunity for all, even for the very humblest.

This country has suffered much in the past fifty years by agitators and ranting demagogues who prate, preach and bellow about the country that the people are being robbed of their just rights, that there is no justice or equality of rights except for the rich, that there is no such thing as "social justice," that the "rich are growing richer and the poor poorer," and all such clap trap to deceive the unthinking.

Even this early in the campaign we hear inkings of this fusillade of falsehood and demagoguery. Disproved as it is by the per capita of money in circulation, and by the plain people's deposits in the savings institutions of our country, the old deceptive phrases are to be repeated by Col. Bryan and the other colonels and majors who are to help Woodrow Wilson and Tom Marshall capture the American markets for the manufacturers of Europe and the wool growers of Australia and the Argentine Republic.

Was there ever a greater piece of gall, brazen inconsistency, injustice, betrayal of friendship, absolutely false aspersions of character—or a more traitorous betrayal of a party committed on one's oath.

JOHN YAZEL BREAKS LEG

WARD KING SAYS
HE WILL COME HERE

Good Roads Advocate Answers Invitation Promptly and Promises to Spend Tuesday Here

MERCHANTS TO MAKE PLANS

George Puntenney, secretary of the Retail Merchants Association this afternoon received a telegram from D. Ward King, the celebrated road drag inventor and advocate of good roads, that he could spend next Tuesday in Rushville. Mr. Puntenney sent Mr. King a night letter last night, extending the invitation, and received a prompt reply.

It is the intention to make the visit of Mr. King here an occasion for a gathering of farmers who are interested in the good roads movement. A plan has been worked out at Connersville for Mr. King to give an address and to explain the good features of the road drag by giving an exhibition of its work.

The subject will be presented at the regular meeting of the Retail Merchants Association on Thursday night, when it is thought some plans for the day will be formulated for the day. Mr. King will be in Connersville on Monday and will come directly to this city. From here he will go to Troy, Ohio.

WILL ENTERTAIN
FELLOW BARRISTERS

John H. Kiplinger Will Act as Host to Rushville's Hungry Lawyers at His Camp Tonight.

COURT ATTACHES INVITED TOO

John H. Kiplinger will entertain the Rushville attorneys and attaches of the Rush circuit court at his camp on the Bishop farm northeast of the city this evening. The kind of grub Attorney Kiplinger is going to feed his fellow barristers has not been given out for publication. It is anticipated by the Rushville lawyers that there will be nothing legal about the "feed." They serve fish as often as the biting's good, and the fish are cooked to a brownish tint by a masterful hand. The cook's name is not divulged either.

But if the meal that the hungry attorneys are asked to devour is anything similar to the one Host Kiplinger served one night last week when a party of newspaper men, Chief of Police McAllister, Rich Reed and several others were entertained to a supper of the kind of fish that Flatrook affords, they will have no complaint.

About eight million men are employed in regular occupations in Great Britain.

THE OBSTACLES

George R. Stuart, Who Will Appear at Chautauqua, One Who Never Misses an Engagement.

INCIDENT IN HIS EXPERIENCE

Popular Lecturer Selected To Close Assembly This Year—Will Give Two Lectures.

George R. Stuart lectured in Rushville once before. That ought to insure the success of the last day of the chautauqua this year. Mr. Stuart will give two lectures on the closing Sunday. In the afternoon his subject will be, "Home the Citadel of the Nation." In the evening he will talk on the subject, "Lopsided Folks," the most popular of all his popular lectures.

Mr. Stuart has a host of admirers here. Although it has been several years since he appeared here, he is remembered as one of the most picturesque and aggressive men who ever addressed a Rushville audience. As an example of his desire to keep his engagements the following incident is recited:

Stuart was enroute from the chautauqua at Pontiac, Ill., to the chautauqua at Lincoln, Nebr. On reaching Kansas City, he found his train late and missed connections. He found he could reach Omaha at 7 p. m. but then be fifty miles away and no train. He wired the General Passenger Agent of the Burlington. "Can you furnish special train to run from Omaha to Lincoln on emergency call in sixty minutes?"

The passenger agent replied in the affirmative, naming the price. Stuart wired: "Have train ready." He wired to Lincoln to have automobile to meet the train to convey him to the chautauqua grounds; wired the manager he would be in on special train. The special train made the fifty miles in fifty minutes, and Stuart reached the platform on time. As he stepped on the platform five thousand people gave an immense applause. Some one from the platform yelled out, "Who always gets there?" And the audience yelled back "Stuart."

At the close of his lecture, Stuart ascertained that the outgoing train was two hours late. This would cause him to miss his connection for the next lecture. He seized a railroad guide and looked up the nearest railroad lines and their schedules. He found fifteen miles away there was a railroad station through which a fast train passed at midnight. If he could make this, he could make his connection. He had one hour and thirty minutes; but the fast train did not stop at this little station.

This was his only chance, as his next date was several hundred miles away. He hired an automobile, hurried across to the little station and found the night operator dozing. Stuart said, "Hello my friend; I am your fellow-worker on a night job, trying to make a living. If I could help you I'm sure I would. You can help me: will you do it?" The operator smiled and said: "I certainly will if I can. What is it sir?" Stuart said "Get hold of your train dispatcher and tell him my story. I am to lecture on your line of railroad at a chautauqua; I have traveled 15 miles through the night to make this engagement. My only chance is the train passing here at midnight. Will you not for the sake of humanity and a hard working man, stop that fast train one minute?"

The answer came back to the operator: "No chance to reach the conductor on this fast train, as he has passed the last stop before reaching Chautauqua on page eight."

OHIO THREATENS AN OUSTER SUIT

Attorney General Calls Pennsylvania Road to Time.

VIOLATION OF ANTI-TRUST LAW

Basing His Proposed Action Upon an Alleged Agreement to Cut Out One-Day Excursion Traffic This Summer, Attorney General Hogan of Ohio Has Directed a Sharp Letter of Inquiry Bearing Upon the Matter.

Columbus, O., July 24.—Addressed to Commissioner Donald of the Central Passenger association, Chicago, a purported letter from George W. Boyd, general passenger agent of the Pennsylvania railroad, dated Philadelphia, July 2, which has fallen into the hands of Attorney General Hogan, has determined that official to institute a suit in ouster against the railroad under the Ohio anti-trust law.

The attorney general has contemplated such action for some time, because he believed that the no-one-day excursion policy adopted last spring by railroads in the association constituted an agreement in violation of the anti-trust law, and because he thought the action was decided upon as a means of breaking down the state's two-cent passenger fare law. The purported letter from Passenger Agent Boyd convinces him he was right in his suspicion.

The copy which fell into Mr. Hogan's hands contained this sentence: "We are glad to lend our aid to the Central Traffic association lines in their effort to secure relief from the 2-cent law by refraining from running our usual special excursions between Pittsburgh, Buffalo and intermediate points during the summer season."

Mr. Hogan wrote a sharp letter to Commissioner Donald of Chicago, asking if he had received the Boyd letter and saying further: "I beg to advise that this department believes your association is instrumental in causing several railroads to violate the laws of this state." He demands to know what regulations have been made with reference to passenger traffic in Ohio.

The attorney general is vigorous in his denunciation of the railways' action regarding excursions. He frankly admits that while possibly he cannot compel railroads to run excursions, the state has power to prevent the railways from reaching an agreement to that effect. Although early in the spring it was said there would be no one-day excursions in Ohio this summer, threats of ouster suits have brought all around except the Pennsylvania.

Crowd Sings Sentimental Songs When British Murderer Is Hanged.

London, July 24.—There were remarkable scenes at Blackburn in connection with the execution of a weaver of the name of Birkitt, who killed his sweetheart by cutting her throat through reasons of jealousy. The vicar held a service in the house in which Birkitt had resided which was very impressive. Among those present was the mother of the murdered girl. A table in the center of the room was covered with floral tributes. Outside the house a crowd of several hundred collected and on the stroke of the fatal hour when the drop fell began singing "Nearer My God to Thee."

A Runaway Streetcar.

Indianapolis, July 24.—Dashing down the Virginia avenue viaduct at a speed estimated at thirty miles an hour, a streetcar loaded with about fifty passengers, struck an interurban car. Sixteen of the passengers received injuries that needed the attention of a physician. Seven of them were taken to the city hospital. Failure of the airbrakes to work is given as the cause of the accident by the streetcar company.

President Preparing Speech.

Washington, D. C., July 24.—President Taft has begun preparation of his speech accepting the presidential nomination of the Republican party. It was said his main argument for reelection to the committee of notification would be based on the achievements of his administration and upon the tariff. The speech will be delivered from the rear portion of the White House Aug. 1.

Brutal Georgians Whip Girl to Point of Death.

Macon, Ga., July 24.—At the point of death, Essie Carter, the young girl whipped at Dawson Sunday night by eighteen prominent men headed by W. S. Dozier, clerk of the Tennesse county superior court, is in a Macon hospital, and the chances are that Dozier and his friends will have to face a charge of murder. The girl has made an ante-mortem statement telling how she was seized, stripped of her clothing and cut to pieces by a buggy whip in the hands of Dozier. The physicians say that the girl has been literally flayed alive.

"Mr. Dozier whipped me because his youngest son, Vogt, loved me and I returned his love," said the girl. "I urged Vogt to give me up to please his father, but he wouldn't do it, and the father whipped me. There were eighteen men in the party, and after I was stripped one of them held a lantern so Mr. Dozier could see where to strike me."

Dozier has issued a statement admitting that he whipped the girl. He says he did it to save his son, who refused to give her up. Prominent lawyers have taken up the girl's case and will prosecute. It is reported that young Vogt Dozier has sworn to kill his father and friends for the maltreatment of the young woman.

Miss Carter, who is an orphan, accompanied by her sister, was brought here for treatment and the hospital physicians say if she recovers she will be crippled for life.

GRAND JURY IS GETTING FACTS

Further Details of New York Police Graft Case.

WHERE LIEUT. BECKER CAME IN

Widow of Murdered Gambler Tells Inquiries That Becker Received a 20 Per Cent Rake-Off on Her Husband's Gambling Business—Harry Vallon, Mild Mannered Gambler, Gives Himself Up, but Has an Alibi.

New York, July 24.—Every word in her husband's affidavit against Lieutenant Becker was true, the widow of Herman Rosenthal told the grand jury. Hysterical and haunted by the fear that she herself would be murdered, Mrs. Rosenthal in intervals of weeping described the intimate relations between the gambler and the lieutenant of police.

She said that Becker received 20 per cent of the profits of Rosenthal's gambling house until Bald Jack Rose, Becker's collector, became too greedy and insisted on a rake-off himself. Then, said Mrs. Rosenthal, her husband was forced to get rid of Becker, although he never believed that Becker would interfere with the business.

And then she told about the raid. She said that Becker, an old friend of hers and Herman's, came to the gambling house, apologetically, and with his hat in his hand. He was sorry, he said, clear down to the ground, but Waldo had ordered him to get Rosenthal and the job had to be done.

Becker knew it was hard on Herman, the widow went on, but he wanted to do the right thing, and so he told Mrs. Rosenthal that Herman could forget the $1,500 he had borrowed from him and that the mortgage would be cancelled.

A few hours after Mrs. Rosenthal left the grand jury room, Harry Vallon, who had given himself up, was under the fire of District Attorney Whitman's questioning. Ready with an alibi, like all of the other figures in the murder case, Vallon insisted that he had had no hand in the killing and that he did not know a single man who fired a shot. But he did admit that he had been around with Jack Rose that night on Lieutenant Becker's business and that with Sam Schepps, he had accompanied Jack Rose to the house of Dora Gilbert, Rosenthal's divorced wife. In this house, it appears, many people had gathered for a pleasant evening. Vallon saw at least a dozen having drinks at somebody's expense. He himself got drunk and left Rose and Schepps at Bridge Webber's some time after 1 o'clock on Tuesday morning. Fuddled and dazed, he stumbled into the subway and went to call on Mr. and Mrs. Harry Signal at 226 East Fourteenth street.

The story told by the mild-mannered, gentle-spoken gambler, whose appearance is very different from that of the square-jawed, heavy-shouldered gunmen with whom he associated, will lead, the district attorney believes, to a breakdown on the part of other men under arrest. Jack Rose, who hired the gray car, has been advised for his own good to walk the line of truth. And if Rose tells what he knows, the district attorney thinks that the evidence will lead to the policemen most concerned in the silencing of Rosenthal.

The third important development in the Rosenthal case and concerning the general investigation as to whether there had been partnership between policemen and gamblers, was the announcement by the district attorney that the offer of private funds to pay for the services of William J. Burns has been accepted. The Burns investigation as planned will be of the broadest nature. It will try to get at what politicians, if any, have been interested in a police-gambler partnership, and it will, of course, take up the Rosenthal murder case in all of its details.

Railroads' Expenses Growing.

New York, July 24.—The narrow margin by which some railroads cling to existence was clearly brought out before the Straus arbitration board and B. A. ENGLAND NEEDS NEW LABOR LEGISLATION

Time Has Come to Reconsider Whole Problem.

London, July 24.—The problem of labor disputes is to be dealt with by the government by legislation. Chancellor Lloyd George in the course of the debate in the house of commons on the dockers' strike, said the labor disputes were becoming more and more serious and were more and more challenging British commercial supremacy. The time had come, said Mr. George, to reconsider the whole problem and the government proposed to deal with it by some form of legislation in the immediate future.

It would be a mistake, said the chancellor, to try to deal with the dock strike as an isolated affair. The industrial council, which takes all such questions into consideration, were now considering the best method of tackling the whole question. The chancellor did not indicate on what lines they would take it up, but intimated that guarantees must be exacted from both sides in labor disputes for enforcement of conditions by the council. His hearers inferred that the chancellor meant that some form of compulsory arbitration was intended. This is likely to bring the government in conflict with the labor members of parliament who are part of the bloc and who will wholly oppose any such movement.

Will Inquire Into It.

New York, July 24.—An inquiry will be conducted before the federal grand jury into the circumstances under which Colonel Christopher Columbus, the former United Wireless head, has been living with Keeper Shea of Atlanta prison at a boarding house in the Bronx, instead of being kept in the Tombs while he has been here since July 1 to testify in the United Wireless bankruptcy proceedings.

A Trip Through South Dakota

"The Sunshine State"
And Land of Promise and Opportunity.

By J. Feudner

PIERRE.

Shortly before twelve o'clock we bade Huron people a kindly farewell and boarded our special for a night ride to Pierre, the capital of the State.

It is picturesquely situated on the low lying bluffs of the Missouri river in the geographical centre of the State, and is surrounded by rich prairie lands capable of sustaining a dense farming population. The climate is mild and invigorating, being warmer in winter by twelve degrees than in other parts of the State, and cooler in the summer by reason of its commanding location upon the Missouri bluffs. These climatic conditions together with a fair average of rainfall make the surrounding country, with its abundant nutritive native grasses, an unequalled stock range where herds fatten without protection the winter through.

The city is well built with fine streets and beautiful homes, many of them constructed of dressed boulders upon approved architectural lines. These boulders are found in the bluffs upon which the city stands and lie thickly over the surface of the surrounding hills giving the landscape a peculiar, distinctive appearance.

After a fine breakfast at a hotel, as the guests of the city, we were taken for a ride over the city and to examine the state capital building. This building is probably the finest structure of its kind in the U. S. considering the amount of money which has been expended in its building, costing less than a million dollars and has really cost the State nothing.

Leaving the capitol the party was taken to the river where Ft. Pierre citizens were in readiness to carry them in launches to the Philip Buffalo ranch seven miles up the river. Here the largest buffalo herd yet in existence may still be seen in nearly the same environment as in the old days when the buffalo was the dominant figure of the country.

After viewing this novel sight we were taken across to Ft. Pierre which was one of the first settlements in South Dakota and therefore is one of its historic spots. The immediate vicinity was one of the headquarters during the Indian outbreak about fifty years ago and there are still many historic reminiscences of the early days in this locality.

After leaving Fort Pierre, and before reaching Rapid City, the "gateway to the Black Hills," we got a glimpse of the "Bad Lands," a seeming mistake of nature, a vast expanse of waste land, where we saw some wonderful natural formations. This weird, strange tract seems to be "the exception to prove the rule" regarding the oft-repeated saying everything in nature has its use. It is a constant source of wonderment and furnishes research opportunity for even the most learned geologist.

HOT SPRINGS.

At eight o'clock that night we reached Hot Springs, in the Black Hills. The party was conducted to the Evans Hotel where a banquet was tendered them by the citizens, and then had free access to the various plunge baths in that city. The swimming tanks are about 40 by 70, three feet deep at one end and fifteen at the other. Slides and plunges are provided to heighten the sport. One would naturally think from the name of "Hot" Springs, that this water was hot. It is at a temperature of 60 degrees, summer and winter and just right for bathing.

In this connection it might be suggested that Rushville could have the pleasure of a warm swim both winter and summer at nominal cost for upkeep when once installed.

As is well known, enough exhaust steam goes to waste at the Water and Light Plant to warm all the water in Flatrock. The pump that is now used to pump water from the river to the tank to furnish river water for the boilers, could also be used to supply the water for the swimming pool. All it requires for a fine sanitary pool the year round is a hole in the ground and some steam coils and an inch stream of water coming in over these coils and the thing is done.

There may be added a roof and four walls, dressing rooms, and a clerk to hand out suits and towels and to lock up valuables.

No more fresh water pours into these baths at Hot Springs than would be furnished by a stream one inch in diameter under our city pressure. The bottom is cement to allow occasional cleaning with a hose.

The pleasure that would be conferred upon our people, rich and poor, by such a bath made practically free is almost inestimable. With a liberal and progressive council we doubt if it would require much pushing to bring matters to a head.

Hot Springs, the town, has a population of more than two thousand. It is situated 3,400 feet above the sea and has a climate that adds fame to the wonderful springs that give it its name. There are about one hundred of these springs having therapeutic properties that make them curative in cases of rheumatism, nervous complaints, indigestion and intestinal disorders, pulmonary affections, diseases of the urinary organs, gout and skin diseases.

In addition to the National Sanitarium there are four other sanitariums, one of them conducted by the Sisters of the Benedictine order, all well equipped and furnishing the best scientific, medical and surgical attendance at reasonable rates. There is also a State Home for disabled soldiers, occupying a commanding elevation just west of the town. It was there the editorial party was treated to a regular "soldier's dinner"—a regular square meal of the most substantial nature.

THE BLACK HILLS.

At 2 o'clock in the afternoon of this day our train left Hot Springs and labored northward toward the crest of the Hills. We passed through Custer, where our former townsman, R. F. Conover, is interested in a rich (?) gold mine.

Reaching Englewood we left our train of heavy Pullmans which could not be carried over the scenic line that climbs the crest and descends on the other side into the Spearfish Canyon.

On the observation cars of the scenic line we began to climb the mountains in earnest. Passing through a succession of deep cuts and over steep hills the train rounded the crown of Terry peak on the left, with a succession of gulches sweeping downward on the right, in which mining towns, mine hoists and isolated houses seemingly hang upon the precipitous side like swallows nests.

Then we passed through a deep cut and came out overlooking the mountains to the east, getting a fine view of Bear Butte, a great mass of porphyry rising abruptly out of the plain twenty-five miles distant to a height of 4,422 feet.

Next the town of Portland flashed into view nestling in the slopes at the head of Deadwood creek. A few moments later the eastern panorama was shut off and the western hills stretched away as far as our eyes could reach and were lost in a blue haze.

Presently the train gliding along the backbone of a ridge made a short turn through a little cut, and we were thrilled as we gazed down into a seemingly bottomless abyss, the tall pines clinging to its sides, hiding its depth.

SPEARFISH CANYON.

Passing through another cut the train seemed to hang upon the brink, and nine hundred feet below we caught a glimpse of the gleam track and flashing water in Spearfish canyon which we reached after seven miles of travel around two sweeping horse shoe curves and through a pine park by sharp turns. From there on for an hour and a half the train swung on through a fantastical land of perpendicular cliffs, crystal streams and steep slopes capped by lesser cliffs. Here they took the form of a feudal castle. There the high rocks resembled a great battleship. Again they appeared like a mighty fortress and everywhere were the blue black pines, bright leaved flowers and sparkling waters purling over rocky beds and dashing over rapids and falls.

SPEARFISH.

Nestling at the foot of the Hills at the mouth of this lovely Spearfish canyon is the pretty, thriving town of Spearfish, with its fine broad streets and miles of concrete walks, its municipal waterworks system and electric light and power plant. Its fine Normal and public schools. Its comfortable homes, green lawns and bubbling fountains and happy, enterprising citizens, numbering some two thousand.

Arriving here just after night had fallen, our party was met at the railway station by the local brass band and escorted to the lodge room of the Masonic temple. There mutual felicitations were exchanged after which we were invited to another hall where we enjoyed a bountiful and delicious mountain trout supper, with accessories of finest fruit and vegetables. For this beautiful valley is no less renowned for its mountain trout than for its fruit and vegetables grown by means of a perfect system of irrigation.

We never saw more ideal camping places anywhere than in Spearfish Canyon, from one end to the other, particularly below the falls, where the canyon widens out a little. The mountain stream that pours through the canyon is heavily stocked with trout, and furnishes to the fisherman the ideal sport. To show how plentiful the trout are it is only necessary to state that at the supper given the editorial party, consisting of about 150 people, quite a number of trout were consumed, and these were all caught that day. Concerning this, the Spearfish Enterprise said:

"L. W. Valentine showed his public spiritedness by giving the services of himself and auto for a day's fishing at Sand creek."

"Bob Todd made the record catch of trout on this occasion, yanking eighty-five fine specimens out of the liquid depths of Jack Kingsley's pond in just an hour and twenty minutes."

The return to Englewood where we found our train awaiting us, was made late at night through a thunderstorm which added grandeur to the scene. As the powerful locomotive climbed the steep ascent and rounded the curves the towering rocks illuminated by blinding sheets of lightning were seen through sweeping veils of rain, and in the intervals of darkness the twinkling electric lights of mines and villages sparkled like stars from a firmament below.

Ample Reasons Why Duke Max Was Popular Within and Without His Dominions.

Duke Max of Bavaria had no greater delight than leaning over the counter of some small shopkeeper, talking gossip or purchasing toys for his great-granddaughters in Austria. Innumerable stories are told illustrating his character. R. H. Goldschmidt, a wealthy banker of Frankfurt, was once journeying to Vienna. Opposite him on the velvet cushion of the first class car sat an old gentleman, whose dress and looks betrayed no uncommon rank. "Are you on a pleasure trip?" asked the banker's vis-a-vis. "Yes," answered the latter, "I am going to visit my daughter, who, thank God, fortunately married the Banker Wiener in Vienna." "How strange," replied his companion; "the incentive to my trip is the same. I am going to visit my daughter in Vienna. Thank God; she, too, is rather fortunately married to the emperor of Austria."

The duke's pocketbook was open to all. Many a poor creature in that Catholic city told of beads for "good Duke Max," and blessed his name. A disciple of old Baltazaria, whose art had once charmed the ballet lovers of music, having grown old in her profession, was unable to get employment. In despair she wrote to Duke Max, giving an account of her situation. His secretary handed him the letter with the remark: "She deserves nothing; she has lived a fast life." "Then," answered his highness, "she will miss her former splendor so much the more," and, sitting down, he wrote her a letter, enclosing money, and signed "From an admirer of your art." —The Argonaut.

The first skyscraper was planned (but not built) by a Parisian architect in the year 1601. It was to be over three hundred feet high and provide room for five hundred persons.

Records Show There Have Been Hotter Days Than These

While you are suffering from the heat and saying this is the hottest weather ever, don't you sometimes stop and reflect that some time, some place, it was just as hot before.

The remarkable exhibition of solar energy witnessed in different parts of the country during the present summer will place it on record as one of the hottest seasons for the last 30 years. Yet, if the record be compared with the experience of other years and other countries we will see that the heat was not excessive, though long continued. It is not an easy matter to get at the old records on the subject, but from those available it appears that the people of the old world have suffered more intense heat than we of the new.

There are many living who recall the terrible experience of 1853 in New York and elsewhere. In that year New Orleans was decimated by yellow fever. In New York city it appeared as if the city was on fire. The thermometer ranged from 95 to 98 degrees for seven days.

The summer of 1854 was another hot spell all over the country, but it appears to have concentrated all its fury in the southwest, particularly in the State of Missouri. According to the statement of an old Missouri pioneer, after the 17th of June of that year not a drop of rain fell during the remainder of the twelve months.

The year 1872 was another fearful one in New York, 155 cases of sunstroke occurring on July 4, of which 72 proved fatal. The principal thoroughfares were like fields of battle. Men fell by the score and the ambulances were in constant requisition. Dumb beasts lay down by the wayside and panted their lives away. Sleep for two or three of the hottest nights was well nigh impossible, and in the tenement districts women and children were found dead on the roofs, to which they had clambered in the hope of getting a breath of cool air. The scenes in the morgue were appalling. Dozens of bodies were on the stone slabs, under the splashing waters, awaiting the recognition of friends or relatives. Here a stalwart man who had been suddenly stricken; there a comely woman, with her face turned toward the light; yonder the official photographer doing his ghastly, yet necessary, work in preserving the pictures of the dead; eager eyed relatives hunted among the corpses for some missing loved one; a horrible stench mingled with the oppressive heat and lamentations filled the air. Over 200 deaths were recorded in three or four days.

The summer of 1879 will be remembered for its torrid atmosphere. The situation will be better understood from the following record: Norwich, Conn., June 2, 100 degrees; Charleston, July 11, 101; New York, June 28, 98; on the same date, St. Louis, 100; Knoxville, Tenn., July 13, 103; Charleston July 14, 111 (16 deaths); Detroit, July 16, 102; New York, July 17, 101.

In 1881 it is said the heat throughout the United States was the greatest on record, the thermometer in many places registered 105 degrees in the shade. In England the mercury ranged from 90 to 101 degrees, and in Paris 93 degrees, July 21, 1881, is said to have been the hottest day ever known up to the time. Another torrid wave came in August of that year, and, with a brief intermission, continued until the middle of September. In Richmond the thermometer registered 105 degrees; in Washington, 104; in Baltimore, Wilmington, Philadelphia, Rochester and elsewhere, from 99 to 100; yet on September 7 snow fell in Deadwood, S. D., to the depth of five inches, and at Bald Mountain the snow was two feet deep.

Wednesday, September 7, 1881, was a day very similar to the memorable one of a century before. A strange, greenish-yellow pall overspread the heaven and so darkened the light of the sun that lamps and gas were lighted; schools and factories closed and multitudes of the ignorant and superstitious believed that the day of judgment had come.

Everything looked changed and unnatural. The faces of the people on the street were ghastly, the gas jets in the stores, instead of showing yellow, were as white and clean as the electric lights, and thousands of the sect known as the Second Adventists gathered in their places of worship and confidently awaited the appearance of the Lord. The dark day was more wonderful in the country. The leaves and withering foliage assumed a most singular tint of green, changing like that of grass to a brownish hue; fowls went to roost and the animal creation most have been greatly mystified by a phenomenon such as they had never witnessed before.

A curious feature of this luminous haze was that it cast no shadow. It was as light under the trees as away from them, and the whole unnatural appearance of things mostly being due to the immense forest fires, which were raging in many parts of the country.

The month of June and July, 1882, were notably oppressive in their atmosphere. On July 13, eighty-eight children in New York city died from the effects of the heat. Car horses fell in their traces; drivers dropped from their seats on tracks and wagons. Broadway was like a great transparent flame of fire. Business was partially suspended and many workshops were closed. The crowded parts of New York on the east and west sides were filled with families mourning for their dead, and undertakers went their busy rounds as if an epidemic prevailed.

Coming down to later years, we all remember the terrible spell of August, 1896, when for a period of five days the thermometer over the entire country ranged from 98 to 102 degrees. Hundreds in the various cities died from sunstrokes and the mortality among infants and young children was appalling.

The summer of 1900 passed into history as the hottest on record for a period of from thirty to forty years, and old residents of the country informed the writer that they had not witnessed such a continuation of high temperature as that of July and August of 1900 for nearly fifty years. The thermometer for three days in May, three in June, 15 in July, 17 in August and four in September, a total of 42 days, averaged from 90 degrees upward, a most remarkable record.

AMUSEMENTS

Miss Florence Rockwell, who scored so decisively as Laura Mardick in "The Easiest Way," will have the title role of "Iris." Miss Rockwell has enjoyed a thorough rest from her strenuous and nerve-racking work in "The Easiest Way," during the run of "The Climax," in which Miss Florence Webber of Indianapolis is playing the leading role, and will doubtless make of Iris a worthy sister of Laura.

A notable feature of the Murat production of "Iris" lies in the fact that Robert Whitworth, leading man of the Murat players, was chosen by Pinero himself to play the role of a youthful lover in the original production of the piece in London, and Mr. Whitworth, in consequence, is thoroughly familiar with Pinero's own idea of the play and will stage it accordingly. Furthermore, Miss Catherine Calhoun, one of the Murat players, was in Virginia Harned's original company in the play in America, and she is thoroughly familiar with all the "business" of the piece. With these two players a nucleus, the production of "Iris" should be superior to anything the stock company has yet offered, promising a performance of extraordinary finish.

Iris, the heroine of the play, is a wealthy young widow with two lovers—a poor, but high-minded young man, and a rich London banker. The young man goes to Canada in search of a fortune in order that he may be able to match the fortune of Iris and win her. While he is gone, Iris loses her fortune and is compelled to enter into a lasso with the banker. The young lover returns wealthy, finds out the position of his sweetheart, and powerfully dramatic scenes ensue.

In addition to Miss Rockwell and Mr. Whitworth, the cast of "Iris" will include Edward Langford, John Cumberland, Miss Lillian Keller and other Murat favorites.

What a Farmer Struck?

What would happen if the farmers of the country would form a union and go on strike? As the ruralist's son puts on his heavy boots at 4:30 a. m. and goes out for a day of exhausting toil in the field where the mercury registers between 75 and 80 degrees, he sees little poetry in the season of seed time. It is the opening of another cycle of exhausting toil, untempered by any eight-hour laws, unbroken by any week-end at the summer hotel or Saturday afternoons off.

The philosopher, however, with a bit of leisure to lean over the fence and watch the other fellow work finds plenty of romance about the scene. The birds are caroling forth their joy at this season of eternal renewal of life, animate and inanimate. The sun bathes the world in a radiance that sets all the earth aglow without scorching.

The renewal fertility of the earth, but so, recently a desert upon cold trains, snow, or ice, now again become productive, springing into fertility at the mere touch of man, is one of the wondrous mysteries of life.

The coming of farm machinery seems to remove the grace and pastoral quality of the work of the hand sower. But in essence we witness today the same act as that which inspired one of the great parables of Jesus 1900 years ago.

If we should rummage among the old tablets which they are digging up in Babylonia, dating back many years before Christ, we would probably find that some of them contained scientific treatises on seed time and harvest, handed down from the fathers of a still more hazy antiquity.

Somewhere back in historic dawn some half human creatures discovered that if instead of devouring the nuts and fruits and grains which he found ready-made for his use, he should drop them in the earth, they would be reproduced a hundred fold, and serve him through seasons when earth's fertility is for the time being suspended.

In the suburbs of towns and cities wherever a laboring or professional man has room for a bit of garden spot, the planting season promotes social intercourse. The minister who is so very scholarly in his pulpit finds that the unlearned mechanic next door has possession of certain facts regarding seed germination that he must know if he is to eke out his slender salary from the potato patch. Garden lore is exchanged across the back yard fence, and a basis for friendship is formed.

House-flies and Disease.

The house-fly stands convicted as a disseminator of disease and a carrier of contagion. Ever since the investigation of the spread of typhoid fever in the United States military camps during the panish war in 1898, the evidence has been accumulating, until today there is no escape from the charges against this tanalizing insect. Every far-reaching probe into sanitary problems is liable to disclose conditions hitherto quite unsuspected; and the indictments already brought against the house-fly during the past few years charge responsibility for a long category of infections, including cholera and various forms of dysentery, diphtheria, erysipelas, contagious ophtalmia, cerebrospinal meningitis, anthrax and possibly smallpox, in addition to typhoid fever.

Whether all of these charges will stand in the light of scientific investigation remains to be seen. It is important, not so much in justice to the accused insect as because of the hygienic and preventive measures which are dependent thereon, that the questions be raised the authoritatively settled. In the case of typhoid, the evidence appears to be complete.

Dr. Torrey, of the Loomis Laboratory of New York, has attempted to supply facts on this question. He has examined the flies caught in the densely populated parts of New York city during a number of months. Both the bacteria occurring in the intestine and those from the surface of the insects were investigated. The flies examined in April and early in June were comparatively free from dangerous bacteria. As the summer season advanced high bacterial counts begin to appear and also an abrupt change in the character of the bacteria. The record counts came at the end of two weeks of excessive heat in July.

Sam Sanderson Says:

That opportunity sits waitin' in a porch swing for many a fellow.

ome idea of the number of organisms that a single insect may carry is indicated by the figures 570 to 4,400,000 for the surface contamination, and 16,000 to 28,000,000 for the intestinal bacterial contents. Most of the bacteria found were comparatively harmless. This investigation, however, was carried on in the crowded city where sewers would naturally carry off all of the most dangerous infective matter. The Journal of the American Medical association says that the house-fly is an "undesirable citizen" in any event, so that the way of extermination already began against it in many quarters deserves encouragement and support.

Free Trade Destructive.

The proposition that the Indiana people should tear down the State house at Indianapolis because some one individual was accused of picking some one's pocket within the protection of its roof is a proposition that will not appeal to the public, says the Marion Chronicle. It is not good logic, not even child reasoning. The State house is a fine building, it is a useful building, a credit to the State.

But who would be so foolish as to argue this proposition at all, or even to advance it, you ask? Tear down the state house because some chance visitor had his pocket picked? Or because some member of the legislature accepted a bribe under its stately roof? What nonsense! Yes, it is nonsense, yet that is the strong argument of the free trade papers; tear down the protective policy for Americans, destroy the magnificent structure, American Industry, the free trader argues, because one American employes does not do right, does not pay his employes all the wages he could afford to pay. It is a fine remedy that is proposed, throw this one man's employes entirely out of work, and with them millions more who are in no way concerned, because one man does not do right, assuming that he does not do right, and in the instance in point there is not a word of proof, not a single showing that he is not paying out for wages all he takes in. On the simple statement that a single manufacturer is not paying good wages the argument is made that the whole business of the country should be ruined.

It is apparent to every one that good business judgment is necessary to commercial success. One man will conduct his business on a safe basis, without a dollar of loss in the entire year, while another, without good judgment, will lose money right and left. One man will pay a certain scale of wages and just manage to make ends meet while another, without good judgment, will pay the same wages and make money. That is too well known to everyone to require the enumeration of individual instances. But why make it impossible for the man of careful business methods to succeed, make it impossible for him to hire labor at all, because the other man does not succeed? Why destroy the whole industry because of one failure in it?

The scoffers exclaims, "Religion is a fraud, just look at that sinner over there, an elder in the church." The just man, looking from the same point of view, exclaims, "What a fine thing that church is, 500 members, and only one black sheep." The demagogue says, "Protection is a fraud, just look at that manufacturer paying pauper wages." The just man exclaims, "What a fine thing protection to American industries it, ten million people given employment at good wages."

These remarks are suggested by an eastern paper which claims that a trust has been formed in an industry having factories there, and that wages have been cut to a point where it is almost impossible to live on them. If the facts are true, kill the trust, do not kill American industries. You may stop a man's headache by cutting his head off, but it isn't the best way. You can kill a trust by killing the whole business, throwing all the labor out of employment, but it isn't the best way. You may extinguish a fire on a ship by sinking the ship in deep sea, but it isn't the best way.

Protection is a wise policy, under it America has grown great, American labor has taken the highest position of any labor in the world. America has the most intelligent labor, it has the most skilled labor, it has the most prosperous labor. American labor lives better than any labor in the world. And because some man, or set of men, organize a trust and impose on the labor employed in that line of industry the suggestion is made that all labor be placed on the same plane as the labor of the cheap labor countries.

However, the argument in that proposition is not likely to mislead many Americans. The wonder is that the attempt is made to mislead on such a flimsy statement of fact.

It is claimed that a literary career does not pay. Nevertheless the fellow who reports the ball game is usually able to support a family.

It is not true that the Mikado's illness was caused by the fact that the bald headed row failed to applaud him.

The express companies say the new rates are too low to give them any profit, but if they don't like the prices they can quit the business and go to farming just as other people have to do.

The lesson of the Rosenthal murder is said to be to avoid gambling, but many men won't do that, as their wives and children would get the money.

The summer hotels offer cheap board to nice young men to amuse their girl guests, and anything that can legally wear trousers can get by.

AMUSEMENTS

The Princess offers a Lubin drama, "Honor and the Sword" for the first picture tonight. It is a story of a millionaire and an actress and has a clever plot. "When the Fire Bells Ring" is the title of a Biograph farce comedy. Tomorrow night the feature war picture "Fighting Dan MacCool" will be shown.

The Portola will have a feature show tonight, exhibiting for one night only the Vitagraph production, "The Lady of the Lake." The picture is in 3 reels and is said to be a fine production. The story is taken from the novel of the same name by Sir Walter Scott and is well known. The famous novel is portrayed in complete detail and the picture is said to be a master piece in the motion picture world.

All arrangements have been perfected by the advance publicity promoters of the Sun Brothers' World Progressive Shows to appear here for two complete performances on Thursday, August 22. This is the twentieth annual tour of this big aggregation touring this country. It is one of the leading shows. Its exhibits, animals and varied features are all of the best. The show is also one of the cleanest ever presented. No grafting games or immoral issues are ever tolerated about the establishment and when the show appears here it will no doubt create more than a favorable impression.

The Sun Brothers' Show while strictly modern and classy in all departments and details as to acts and features, together with management and paraphernalia, presents the "big show" program in the good old way—one act—one circle at a time. This is being done this season, owing to a popular demand. People attending a tented show want to see everything to be seen. The present tendency of some shows to introduce three rings with a succession of bewildering "fill-in" acts, confuses the auditor and nobody sees any one thing well. Sun Brothers are presenting an exhibition of quality, and every act exhibited can be seen without having a case of "rubberneckitis," and there is no question but that the show is greatly enjoyed.

The massive tents will be spread on the grounds in West Third street, which are admirably adapted for exhibition purposes and are also high and dry and very accessible from all parts of town.

It is said that the performing elephants are among the strong features of the performance. They do all kinds of new stunts, play football, harmonize on musical instruments, engage in bowling contests, have a regular military battle, do aerobatics, etc. A troupe of ferocious black-maned African lions are also featured heavily and are handled by Captain Peter Kardova, a great French lion breaker, who appears in a big steel arena, placing them through their various thrilling exploits.

Nearly 100 men, women and children will participate throughout in the greatest acts imaginable. A blue ribboned horse fair; sensational aerial acts; a great band concert, are among the free shows, to be seen daily on the show grounds at 12:30.

SOCIETY NEWS

Mrs. J. H. Frazee entertained today at her home in North Harrison street at a one o'clock luncheon, the occasion being the announcement of the engagement of her daughter, Miss Florence to Helm Woodward of Cincinnati, Ohio.

The house was made attractive with decorations of gladiolas and sweet peas. Pink and white was used throughout the luncheon. The announcement was made in the unique way of having miniature announcement cards tied to the handles of small French baskets, filled with pink and white roses and sweet peas. These were given as favors to the guests. As the guests took their places Miss Florence sang sweetly, "All For You."

In the afternoon Mrs. Frazee was assisted in a musical program by Mrs. Ross McDaniel and the Misses Lelia Kinder of Tipton, Zanna Rakestraw of Angola, Norma Smith, Jesse Kitchen, Marie Clark and Florence Frazee.

The out of town guests were the Mesdames Wilson McGaw and Cecil Clark of Richmond; Harry E. Grishaw and Fred Fox of Tipton; Walter Frazee and Joseph Cook of Louisville, Ky.; N. G. Wills of Connersville; J. E. Fish of Indianapolis; and the Misses Frances and Harriet Haas and Lelia Kinder of Tipton; Juliet Crittenger and Ruth Keltner of Anderson; Zanna Rakestraw of Angola.

WOMEN'S WOES

Rushville Women Are Finding Relief at Last.

It does seem that women have more than a fair share of the aches and pains that afflict humanity; they must "keep up," must attend to duties in spite of constantly aching backs, or headaches, dizzy spells, bearing down pains; they must stoop and to stoop means torture. They must walk and bend and work with racking pains and many aches from kidney ills. Sick kidneys cause more suffering than any other organ of the body. Keep the kidneys well and much suffering is saved. Read of a remedy for kidneys only that is endorsed by people you know.

Mrs. William Merrill, 332 W. Fourth street, Rushville, Ind., says: "For some time I suffered from a weak and painful back and I was also subject to headaches. I had but little energy and the simplest of my household duties was a burden. My husband finally procured Doan's Kidney Pills for me at F. B. Johnson & Co.'s Drug Store and since taking them, my condition has been better in every way. I am grateful to Doan's Kidney Pills for their work."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

but it had been deflected by the young man, who seemed to find less personal topics more to his taste. Now she was advancing openly upon it, inquiring about the snow-bound group at Perley's, and awarding to any but the august name for which her ears were pricked a perfunctory attention. It was part of the natural perversity of man that Dominick should shy from it and expend valuable time on descriptions of the other prisoners.

"There was an actor there," he said, "snowed in on his way to Sacramento, a queer-looking chap, but not bad."

"An actor?" said Berny, trying to look interested. "What did he act?"

"Melodrama, I think. He told me he played all through the northwest and east as far as Denver. The poor chap was caught up there and was afraid he was going to lose a Sacramento engagement that I guess meant a good deal to him. He was quite interesting, been in the Klondike in the first rush and had some queer stories about the early days up there."

Berny's indifferent glance became bright and fixed under the steady effect of sudden interest.

"Been in the Klondike?" she repeated. "What was his name?"

"Buford, James Defay Buford. He'd been an actor at the opera house at Dawson."

"Buford," said Berny, turning to place a helping of pease on the plate the Chinaman held toward her. "I never heard of him. I thought perhaps it might have been some actor I'd seen play. I'd like to know an actor in private life. They must be so different."

She ladled a second spoonful of pease on to her own plate and as she began to eat them, said:

"It must have been interesting having the Cannons up there. When I read in the paper that they were in Antelope too, I was awfully glad because I thought it would be such a good thing for you to get to know the old man well, as you would, snowed in that way together."

"I knew him before. My father and mother have been friends of his for years."

"I know that. You've often told me. But that's a different thing. I thought if he got to know you intimately and liked you, as he probably would," she glanced at him with a coquettish smile, but his face was bent over his plate—"why, then, something might come of it, something in a business way."

She again looked at him, quickly, with sidelong investigation, to see how he took the remark. She did not want to irritate him by alluding to his small means, anyway on this night of reconciliation.

"It would be so useful for you to get solid with a man like Bill Cannon," she concluded with something of timidity in her manner.

Despite her caution, Dominick seemed annoyed. He frowned and gave his head an impatient jerk.

"Oh, there was nothing of that kind," he said hurriedly. "We were just snowed in at the same hotel. There was no question of intimacy or friendship about it, any more than there was between Judge Washburne and me, or even the actor."

Berny was exceedingly disappointed. Had the occasion been a less momentous one she would have expressed herself freely. In her mind she thought it was "just like Dominick" to have such an opportunity and let it go. A slight color deepened the artificial rose of her cheeks and for a moment she had to exert some control to maintain the silence that was wisdom. She picked daintily at her food while she wrestled with her irritation. Dominick showed no desire to resume the conversation, and a silence of some minutes' duration rested over them, until she broke it by saying with a resolute cheerfulness of tone:

"Rose Cannon was there, too, the paper said. I suppose you got to know her quite well?"

"I don't know. I saw a good deal of her. There was only one sitting-room and we all sat there. She was there with the others."

"Really, Berny, I Don't Know," Answered the Victim.

"What's she like?" said Berny, her curiosity on the subject of this spoiled child of fortune overcoming her recent annoyance.

"You've seen her," he answered, "you know what she looks like."

"I've never seen her to know who she was. I suppose I've passed her on the streets and at the theaters. Is she cordial and pleasant, or does she give herself airs because she's Bill Cannon's daughter?"

Dominick moved his feet under the table. It was difficult for him to answer Berny's questions politely.

"She doesn't give herself the least airs. She's perfectly simple and natural and kind."

"That's just what I've heard," his wife said, giving her head an agreeing wag. "They say she's just as easy and unassuming as can be. Did you think she was pretty when you saw her close to?"

"Really, Berny, I don't know," answered the victim in a tone of goaded patience. "She looks just the same close to as she does at a distance. I don't notice people's looks much. Yes, I suppose she's pretty."

"She has blonde hair," said Berny, leaning forward over her plate in the eagerness of her interest. "Did it look to you as if it was bleached?"

He raised his eyes, and his wife encountered an unexpected look of anger in them. She shrank a little, being totally unprepared for it.

"How should I know whether her hair was bleached or not?" she said sharply. "That's a very silly question."

Berny was taken aback.

"I don't see that it is," she said with unusual and somewhat stammering mildness. "Most blonde-haired women, even if they haven't bleached their hair, have had it restored."

Dominick did not answer her. The servant presented a dish at his elbow and he motioned it away with an impatient gesture.

Berny, who was not looking at him, went on.

"What kind of clothes did she wear? They say she's an elegant dresser, gets almost everything from Paris, even her underwear. I suppose she didn't have her best things up there. But she must have had something, because the papers said they'd gone prepared for a two weeks' trip."

"I never noticed anything she wore."

"Well, isn't that just like you, Dominick Ryan!" exclaimed his wife, unable, at this unmerited disappointment, to refrain from some expression of her feelings. "And you might know

STOP SNEEZING AND SNIFFLING
For Hay Fever and Rose Cold Try Ely's Cream Balm. It Gives Instant Relief.

"Balm" is just the word for this soothing, healing, antiseptic Cream. Its effect in cases of Hay Fever and Rose Colds are almost magical. You just grease the nostrils with a little of the Cream, inhale the pleasant, aromatic fumes; and in a few minutes your head begins to clear, the soreness is relieved, and the sneezing, sniffing and weeping stopped. People who have suffered for years with Hay Fever and Rose Cold can be free from all the distressing symptoms by simply using Ely's Cream Balm morning and night during the Hay Fever Season.

Hay Fever is due to an irritated, inflamed condition of the mucous membrane (inside skin) of the nose and throat. Strong powders, snuffs and sprays simply aggravate the trouble, but Ely's Cream Balm soothes, heals and strengthens the raw, sore membranes, and in this way not only relieves the trouble but prevents its return.

All druggists sell and recommend it. Get a fifty cent bottle today—use it according to directions—get your money back if you are not satisfied.

I'd be anxious to hear what she had on."

"I'm very sorry, but I haven't an idea about any of her clothes. I think they were always dark, mostly black or brown."

"Did you notice," almost pleadingly, "what she wore when she went out?" Mrs. Whiting, the forelady at Hazel's millinery, says she imported a set of sables, muff, wrap and hat, for her this autumn. Hazel says it was just the finest thing of its kind you ever laid your eyes on. Did she have them up there?"

"I couldn't possibly tell you. I don't know what sables are. I saw her once with a fur cap on, but I think it belonged to Willoughby, an Englishman who was staying there, and used to have his cap hanging on the pegs in the hall. It's quite useless asking me these questions. I don't know anything about the subject. Did you wind the clock while I was away?"

He looked at the clock, a possession of his own, given him in the days when his mother and sister delighted to ornament his rooms with costly gifts and in which he had never before evinced the slightest interest.

"Of course, I wound it," Berny said with an air of hurt protest. "Haven't I wound it regularly for nearly three years?"

This brought the subject of Rose Cannon to an end and she was not alluded to again during the dinner. The conversation reverted to such happenings in the city as Berny thought might interest her husband, and it seemed to her that he was more pleased to sit and listen to her chatter of her sisters, the bank, the theaters, and the shops, than to dilate any further on his adventures in the snow-bound Sierra.

When the dinner was over, they returned to the front of the flat, where next to the parlor there was a tiny hall-room fitted up as a smoking-room and den. It was merely a continuation of the hall, and "the cozy corner" which Berny had had a Polk street upholsterer construct in it, occupied most of the available space, and crowded such visitors as entered into the corners. It had been Berny's idea to have this room "lined with books" as she expressed it, but their joint possessions in this line consisting of some twenty-five volumes, and the fact that the contracted space made it impossible to accommodate both the books and the cozy corner, Berny had decided in favor of the latter. She now seated herself on the divan that formed the integral part of this construction, and, piling the pillows behind her, leaned luxuriously back under the canopy of variegated stuffs which was supported by two formidable-looking lances.

Dominick sat in his easy chair. He always smoked in this room and read the papers, and presently he picked them up from the table and began to look them over. The conversation languished, became spasmodic, and finally died away. Berny, leaning back on the cushions, tried several times to revive it, but her husband from among the spread sheets of the evening press answered her with the inarticulate sounds of mental preoccupation, and sometimes with no sound at all, till she abandoned the attempt and leaned back under the canopy in a silence that was not by any means the somnolent quietude of after-dinner torpor.

The clock hands were pointing to half-past nine when a ring at the bell was followed by the appearance of the Chinaman at the door, stating that the expressman had come with Mr. Ryan's valises. Dominick threw down his papers and left the room. As Berny sat silent, she could hear the expressman's gruff deep voice in the hall and the thuds of the valises as he thumped them down at the stair-head. Dominick answered him and there were a few more remarks, followed by the retreating sound of the man's heavy feet on the stairs and the bang of the hall door. She sat looking at the clock, waiting for her husband to return, and then as he did not come and the hall seemed singularly quiet she leaned forward and sent an exploring glance down its dim length. Dominick was not there, but a square of light fell out from an open doorway of his room.

"Dominick," she called, "what are you doing?"

He came to the door of the room in his shirt-sleeves, a tall figure looking lean and powerful in this closer-fitting and lighter garb.

"I'm unpacking my things, and then I'm going to bed."

"Oh!" she answered with a falling inflection, leaning forward, with her elbows planted on her knees, craning her neck to see more plainly down the narrow passageway. "It's only half-past nine; why do you want to go to bed so early?"

"I'm tired, and it will take me some time to get these things put away."

"Can I help you?" she asked without moving.

"No, thanks. There's nothing much to bother about. Good night, Berny," and he stepped back into the room and shut the door.

Berny sat as he had left her for a space, and then drew back upon the divan and leaned against the mound of pillows. She made the movement slowly and deliberately, her face set in a rigidity of thought to which her body seemed fixed and obedient. She sat thus for an hour without moving, her eyes staring before her, two straight lines folded in the skin between her brows.

So he was still angry, angry and unforgiving. That was the way she read his behavior. The coldness that he exhaled—that penetrated even her insensitive outer shell—she took to be the coldness of unexpressed indignation. He had never before been just like this. There was a something of acquired forbearance and patience about him—a cultivated thing, not a spontaneous outward indication of an inner condition of being—which was new to her observation. He was not sulky or cross; he was simply withdrawn from her and trying to hide it under a manner of careful, guarded civility. It was different from any state she had yet seen him in, but it never crossed her mind that it might be caused by the influence of another woman.

He was still angry—that was what Berny thought; and sitting on the divan under the canopy with its fiercely-poled lances she meditated on the subject. His winning back was far from accomplished. He was not as "easy" as she had always thought. A feeling of respect for him entered into her musings, a feeling that was novel, for in her regard for her husband there had previously been a careless, slighting tolerance which was not far removed from contempt. But if he had pride enough to keep her thus coldly at arm's length, to withstand her attempts at forgiveness and reconciliation, he was more of a man than she thought, and she had a harder task to handle than she had guessed. She did not melt into anything like self-pity at the futility of her efforts, which, had Dominick known of them, would have seemed to him extremely pathetic. That they had not succeeded gave her a new impetus of force and purpose, made her think, and scheme with a hard, cool resolution. To "make up" and gain ascendancy over Dominick, independent and proudly indifferent, was much more worth while than to bully Dominick, patient, enduring and ruled by a sense of duty.

(1) Verses 24-25—What does the kingdom of heaven here stand for?

(2) Would you say, and why, that Jesus here meant that the church as a visible society on earth contains both good and bad people?

(3) What is the difference in the results as between good seed and bad seed as suggested in this parable?

(4) What in this parable stands for wheat and what for tares?

(5) What resemblance is there between the wheat and the tares?

(6) If Christ stands for the man who sowed "good seed," whom does the enemy stand for who sowed the tares?

(7) What chance would Satan have to sow tares if people kept wide awake?

(8) Verse 26—Can "tares," or sin, ever be regarded as another form of good? Give your reasons.

(9) Is it possible, or not, and why, for sin to produce good results?

(10) Verse 27—Who are those who generally complain to God because of sin in the church?

(11) Verses 28-29—Should a Christian church or not, and why, expel all those members who are admittedly living sinful lives? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

(12) There used to be frequent trials of members in evangelical churches for immorality. When did you last learn of such a trial and how is it that they are now so infrequent?

(13) Verse 30—What will be the difference in that great day between the doom of a sinner in the church and a sinner in the world?

(14) What will be the fate of the finally impenitent sinner?

(15) What will be the final condition of all true Christians?

(16) Verses 36-37—Who is the sower of the good seed?

(17) In what sense is Christ the only sower of good seed?

(18) Verses 38-39—What results do wicked people accomplish in the world?

(19) When and what will the harvest be?

(20) Verses 40-43—Does Jesus mean that the literal tares are burned in the fire or that sinners will be? Give your reason.

MAINTAIN WILL WAS A FORGERY

Interesting Case Is Being Bitterly Fought.

REQUITED ACT OF KINDNESS

McMurrin's Entire Wealth of $40,000 Was Left to Poor Servant Girl Who Fed Traveler at the Door, According to the Writing on a Scrap of Brown Wrapping Paper, Which Relatives of Decedent Say Is a Forgery.

Petersburg, Ind., July 24.—The Marshall-McMurrin will case, filed here, on a change of venue from Vanderburg county, is being tried here before a struck jury. More than seventy witnesses have been summoned, some from as far away as California.

The plaintiffs contend that the will, which had been written on a piece of brown wrapping paper, in which McMurrin gave his entire wealth of $40,000 to a poor servant girl who fed him while he was hungry and was berated for so doing by her employer, had been forged and was not in McMurrin's handwriting. In evidence they introduced many letters written by McMurrin.

An effort is also to be made to prove McMurrin was not himself at the time the will was made. All McMurrin's relatives are here, and every effort will be made to have the will set aside. McMurrin was regarded as eccentric, but was noted for kind deeds. Sometimes he would disguise himself as a tramp and "hike" along the roadways asking for food, merely to test the generosity of the people on whom he called. It was on one of these occasions he met the servant who became his heir. She was so kind to him that he told her, it is said, he would remember her in his will.

WORKS SCHEME

Young Man Represents Himself as Another and Gets Money.

Lafayette, Ind., July 24.—Charged with defrauding an Indianapolis firm by means of a bogus telegram, Paul Mafola, aged nineteen, is in jail here awaiting trial. The young man has been here several weeks, coming to Lafayette from Indianapolis. At the Johnson hotel he made the acquaintance of Arco B. Conrad.

Mafola learned that Conrad was expecting a letter from his employers containing a remittance for traveling expenses. Mafola went to the post-office and inquired for Conrad's mail, representing that to be his name. No mail had come, so Mafola thought of another scheme. He went to the telegraph company and sent a telegram to the Indianapolis company, signing Conrad's name, and requesting $30 expense money to be sent by wire. The money was sent to him promptly and he signed Conrad's name to the receipt. Then Mafola went to a clothing store and fitted himself out in a new suit.

When Conrad saw Mafola he called the police, and as a result of the investigation the whole scheme was revealed and the money recovered.

Close Call For Workmen.

Fort Wayne, Ind., July 24.—Fifteen minutes after the noon whistle had called the employees of the Fort Wayne Foundry and Machine works off duty, a big compressed air tank in the yards of the foundry exploded with terrific force. Buildings in the vicinity were shaken and one piece of the steel tank weighing 150 pounds was hurled more than a block distant and imbedded deeply in the ground. The fact that the men had stopped work for lunch but a few minutes before the accident alone saved injuries and possible loss of life to many of them.

Aid For Alleged Dynamiters.

Indianapolis, July 24.—The Central Labor Union has taken steps to aid in raising a local fund for the defense of the men indicted in the dynamite conspiracy cases, which are set for trial in federal court Oct. 1. The two local men under indictment are S. P. Meadows, secretary of the Building Trades Council, and Fred Sherman, business agent of the Indianapolis local of iron workers.

Another Ticket Office Robbed.

Fort Wayne, Ind., July 24.—When he turned around as somebody tapped him on the shoulder, Heber Mosher, night ticket agent for the Pennsylvania railroad at Columbia City, looked into the muzzle of a revolver in the hands of a robber. Mosher threw his hands up at the request of the robber, who then took $145 from the cash drawer and made his escape.

A $1,000,000 Deal For New Mines.

Terra Haute, Ind., July 24.—Hugh Shirkle, a coal operator, has filed papers for the mineral rights of 1,000 acres of coal land northwest of the city. More contracts are to be filed this week. Mr. Shirkle's company will spend $1,000,000 in opening up mines in the new field.

AMERICAN COMPANY RAIDED BY REBELS

Rojas Manages to Maintain His Reputation.

Chihuahua, July 24.—When he reached here with his rebel command, enroute to Sonora, Antonio Rojas upheld his record as "rebel raider." The store of the Dolores Mines company, an American concern, was looted of $5,000 worth of goods and the safe blown and $6,000 in cash taken. All the pack mules of the company were taken. The rebels were opposed by eighty federals as they entered the town and this enraged them, as the rebels had heard that the mining company had been paying and feeding the federals.

DECREASE REPORTED

Nearly Every County in State Shows Shortage of Personal Property.

Indianapolis, July 24.—Almost all the counties in the state have decreases in personal property appraisements this year, according to statements made before the state board of tax commissioners by county assessors, county auditors and county treasurers, summoned to talk over county appraisements.

Shortage in forage and grain crops last year, resulting in a shortage of feed for live stock, was given as the chief cause of the decrease.

The Grace Trial Set For Monday.

Atlanta, Ga., July 24.—Mrs. Daisy Opie Grace, formerly Mrs. Daisy Opie of Philadelphia, will be put on trial next Monday on the charge of having drugged and shot her husband in order to get $25,000 insurance on his life. Her husband, who is still paralyzed from the wound, has been summoned as a witness against her and will be brought into court on a stretcher.

Didn't Like Foreign Bunting.

Helsingfors, Finland, July 24.—At a swimming competition here in which several foreigners from the Olympic games at Stockholm took part, the police became angered at the display of foreign flags in honor of the visitors, and seized the American, British and Swedish flags.

GENERAL CARTER RELIEVED.

Brigadier General Hoyt Will Take Command of the Troops in Texas.

Brigadier General Ralph W. Hoyt will succeed Major General William H. Carter in command of the maneuver brigade in Texas when the latter is relieved, Aug. 15. General Carter will go to Washington to resume his duties as assistant chief of staff, relieving General Arthur Murray, who will take command of the department of the west, with headquarters at San Francisco.

The large reduction in the number of troops in Texas has caused the abandonment of the original plan to rotate the various major generals in tours of duty there.

At present only a brigade remains of the original maneuver division, and while it is not contemplated to reduce considerably the present force, the brigade is scarcely of sufficient importance to justify the assignment of a major general to that command.

FARM COURSE FOR SCHOOL FAVORED

State Superintendent Greathouse Announces Plan to Teach Agriculture in Rural Communities.

PURDUE WILL CO-OPERATE

Question Will be Considered by Rush County Board of Education—
Notice Received.

The little red school house and the consolidated schools of the rural districts no longer will teach only the "three R's" if the efforts of Charles A. Greathouse, State superintendent of public instruction, are successful. Mr. Greathouse announced that beginning with the coming school year, the State education department will attempt to introduce the teaching of agriculture as one of the leading subjects in the rural schools. He has arranged to co-operate with the agricultural department of Purdue University in carrying on the work.

C. M. George, county superintendent, has received word of the new plans of the State agricultural department. He says that the plan will be considered by the Rush county board of education. The agitation for a course of this kind in the county schools has not met with approval here.

"We should teach agriculture in the rural schools," said Mr. Greathouse. "This course has never been offered in the past, but we mean to introduce it and encourage it all we can this year. We will include an elementary agriculture course in our outline of courses for next year, and I hope the rural schools will become interested in it."

The agriculture course will include the subjects of soils, tillage, drainage, fertilization, the proper rotation of crops, and many other phases of scientific farming. The instruction in these courses will be given the teachers at the institutes and they will be urged to promote the work as much as possible.

The faculty of Purdue University has notified Mr. Greathouse that it will assist the department. The members of the faculty will give their services to the institutes. It is hoped that the work will become a distinctive feature of education in rural communities of the State.

PROPOSED LAW IS MET WITH FAVOR

Richmond and Wayne County School Authorities Are in Line With Greathouse's Suggestion.

ALREADY HAVE PLAY GROUNDS

The agitation which is being started by Charles A. Greathouse, State superintendent of public instruction, to hold school in the cities of the State practically throughout the entire year is meeting with a great deal of encouragement from the local authorities, says the Richmond Palladium. Superintendent T. A. Mott of the Richmond city schools and Charles O. Williams, superintendent of the Wayne county schools believe that the plans to have school during the summer months is a practical one and one which will meet with popular favor.

"This year the Richmond school authorities are conducting two play grounds to the end that children who are idle may have some place to play under good supervision," stated Mr. Mott.

County Superintendent Williams stated that legislation should be adopted to make it possible to hold school during the summer months in the cities. It would not only raise the standard of efficiency of the teachers, but aid the children along lines which they can not secure during the winter months. Mr. Williams believes that courses in domestic science and manual training should be given during the summer months.

CATTLE BUYERS IBEMOAN FATE

Say Country Housewives Rule the Roost Now and Allow Only Jerseys to be Sold.

THEY WANT TO SELL THE MILK

Stockbuyers here in Rushville are bemoaning their fate. Time was, they say, when they could go out in a day and buy up a load of good beef steers. But how time does change. Yesterday a street car ran into the forum at Rome where Mark Anthony delivered Caesar's funeral oration, but the change in this instance is no more marked than in the first.

"Why is it you can't buy good steers in Rush county any more?" was asked a cattle buyer this morning.

"Reason? Reason enough!" exclaimed the buyer. "It is because the country women are ruling the households now. They all want Jersey cattle nowadays, and they generally get what they want. Jerseys give lots of milk and there is a great demand for milk in Indianapolis."

Dr. Paxton of Glenwood was called and found Mrs. Chance was suffering from two broken ribs and numerous bruises.

C. W. STIVERS IS BACK IN HARNESS

—than is illustrated by Col. Roosevelt's action toward William Howard Taft and the Republican party?

No more reprehensible instance blackens the pages of American political history. Roosevelt's attacks and aspersions of President Taft's record as President are absolutely false; while his betrayal of the great party that has signally honored him is the grossest and basest ingratitude.

Every true Republican must deplore the disgrace put upon his party by this spectacle. Repeatedly "bearing false witness against his neighbor," and his party also, he has the gall to falsely apply the commandment "thou shalt not steal" to honorable men who stood true to their constituents and the best interests of this country.

It is within the memory of the middle-aged that the policies advocated in the Wilson-Marshall platform does for the country in bringing on the rule of low wages, low prices or farm products and soup house conditions to all manufacturing districts in America.

The Republican party must stand true to a protective policy and prosperity, as against free trade, low wages, low prices or farm products, closed shops and the regulation Democratic souphouse regime.

It would be a stupendous piece of folly for Republican voters to defeat their party on the false issue raised by Roosevelt to gratify his selfish ambition.

Next to that kind of folly on the part of the Republicans would be the election by American voters of Wilson and Marshall and the inauguration of free trade conditions again in our country.

FORMER RESIDENT IS DEAD AT FOREST

John M. Darby, Age 75, Who Once Lived in Milroy, Expires After Long Illness.

WAS VETERAN OF CIVIL WAR

Word has been received here of the death of John M. Darby, a former resident of this place but who has resided at Forest, Ind., since 1892.

He was a son of John and Rachael Darby, was born May 30th, 1874 near Indianapolis in Marion county. He passed away July 6th, 1912 at Forest Hill, Ind., aged 75 years 1 month and 7 days. He was married to Elizabeth Smisor at Milroy, Ind., on January 6th, 1861. He served as a volunteer in Co. G, 89th Indiana Regiment, in the Civil War from Aug. 1862 to August 1863. After his discharge he returned to his family Milroy where they lived on a farm for two years then moving to the Cloverdale neighborhood north of Forest. In 1878 the family went to Kansas where they stayed but five months and returned to Forest, living here seven years when they again went west in 1885 near Cassville, Missouri. After seven years in Missouri they again in 1892 returned to Forest where the family has since resided in their present home. He is survived by an aged wife, one son, Jacob M.
